PRINCIPAL CONSULTANT

Mark is a proven, agile and engaging executive coach and executive leadership development specialist. He has a wealth of knowledge and experience developed through a successful professional career as a senior leader within the construction industry and public sector.

Mark supports clients by:

- Increasing professional success through enhancing personal and professional leadership, engagement and communication strategies
- Building organisational leadership through guided development
- Supporting organisations to change, grow and mature through improved leadership
- Coaching and supporting business leaders and the leaders of the future.

As an executive coach, Mark has supported senior, executive and CEO level clients to recognise and realise their leadership potential and in turn become leaders within their own organisations. While an executive leadership development specialist, Mark has helped executive leadership teams, and leaders in waiting, develop their individual and collective knowledge and skills, and find ways to energise and lead their organisations, departments and teams.

Drawing on his strength as a gifted storyteller with a real flair for the metaphor, Mark helps clients visualise the outcomes they wish to achieve and then put in place the practical steps to make it happen. Mark's curriculum vitae includes 6 years in the electronic service industry, 7 years as a learning professional in the building and construction industry, and 11 years as a leader within the public sector.

In 2013 Mark ventured into the world of executive coaching and executive leadership development to lead the successful development and implementation of a leadership strategy to address change, challenge management, business continuity and engagement within the high-pressure environment of a company listing on the Australian Stock Exchange.

Since that time, Mark's client base has grown to include a number of state government departments and authorities, government service providers, large private sector organisations across health, engineering and professional services and most recently a not-for-profit with the objective of helping young people in need.

Mark's professional qualifications include a Bachelor of Behavioural Sciences from Griffith University and a Diploma of Customer Service Management. He is an Accredited Executive Coach through the Executive Central Coaching Academy.

Away from coaching, Mark enjoys a real outdoor life along with his wife Helena, and their two young sons. Mark is also a published writer and storyteller with work appearing in a number of Australian publications.
